Being a Camp Counselor is one of the most enjoyable positions available to a young person, but it is also HARD WORK. It involves dealing with children and your peers on a continuous basis. It calls for both physical and emotional stamina and is very demanding. On the other hand, it is a very rewarding job, and gives you outstanding experiences with others and a chance to sharpen your human relations and physical skills. A camp experience also allows you to see yourself, to be evaluated on almost a continuous basis on the tasks you are assigned, and to experiment with leadership styles.
